

Dear Homeschooled Varsity Football Teams,

We at the University of Tulsa are passionate about encouraging you to begin preparation for another exciting football season in 2010! As you begin to train for an opportunity to be the best you can be, I want to encourage you to remember what makes championship football teams special and that is a unique brand of character that will separate you from the rest. At the University of Tulsa, we pride ourselves on our outstanding academic reputation and our coaching staff would also like to ask you to continue to pursue excellence in your academic endeavors. Your future as leaders in the community depends on your willingness to make your academic work a priority. I would also like to encourage you to become an integral part of your community and pursue opportunities where you can make a difference in someone's life. Volunteering and community service are ways you can help make your community a better place for everyone. You make a living by what you get, but, you make a life by what you give. Strive to look for opportunities where you can truly make a difference for others.

As you begin preparing for your season, we would also like to encourage you to gear up for a championship caliber season. A unique opportunity awaits you as the inaugural National Homeschool Football Championship Series (NHFCS) begins this fall in Tulsa, Oklahoma. This championship series offers the top four homeschool teams in the nation to compete for the right to be champions on the field versus rankings. This would be a tremendous honor to represent your community for the right to be the best.

Todd Graham
Head Football Coach
The University of Tulsa

In summary, we hope you will begin preparing for the new season with the desire to be men of character and men that are hungry for academic excellence as well as a willingness to be instrumental members of their community. Of course, we hope you will aspire to be the best homeschool football program in the nation when you compete for the NHFCS title.

Please accept our best wishes as you make plans for a great season and we wish you continued success in all your endeavors, and remember, Go Hurricane!

God Bless,
